We keep a large, up-to-date list of the best places to watch movies online, but how should you determine which one to start exploring first? One way is to look through this comparison table. Each of the movie streaming sites mentioned below offers action and comedy movies, but not all of them cover popular genres such as horror, drama, and children's movies; and some categories such as foreign and Latino are even rarer. Just check the table to see how they compare to each other. Most of these sites also include free TV shows, in addition to a large collection of free movies. Some videos may have a higher video quality than others, and some allow you to pay for more content than what's offered with a free user account. Different filtering options are available with some of these sites to help you find your favorite movies or help you stumble on something new to watch. There are even free movie apps offered by most sites that stream this movie. © Brand New Images/Stone/Getty Images Given that there are different features included at these sites, a comparison chart like this is extremely useful in deciding which site you should start without having to visit each of them to see what they offer. Visit YouTube's Where to Watch help page to see where you can watch videos on YouTube. [2] Some of the films on YouTube and Watch Documentary contained commercials, but some of the films we tested were completely none. Another thing to remember about YouTube is that you can't sort movies for free by genre, so although you can find a documentary Thrillers there, for example, you will have to search for movies manually. If you're someone who likes to watch movies online, but you don't want to pay for a streaming service that you'll barely use, you're not alone. There are many methods to watch movies online for free, but not all of them are legal or safe. We've included a list below of the most trusted sites that you to watch movies online without spending a penny. Here is a list of the best places to fix our free (and safe) online. Additional tutorials Sony Crackle, Crackle or Crackle Plus Once called Simply Crackle, this free streaming site has undergone almost as many name changes as P. Diddy. Originally controlled by Sony, it is now a joint venture between Sony and Chicken Soup for Soul Entertainment (CSS). That partnership created a new body called Crackle Plus and it is believed that this will also become the name of the streaming service. However, one looks at the site and it is clear that simplicity has won: It is only called Crackle. Whatever you call it, it includes content from six ad-supported CSS streaming services (Popcornflix, Popcornflix Kids, Popcornflix Comedy, Frightpix, Españolflix and Truli), as well as some Sony movies and TV shows. You'll find a huge number of blockbusters like Speed, The Transporter and Close Encounters of the Third Kind, and a host of little-known but interesting B movies. Crackle is a great resource, although the constant disruption from advertisers can get old pretty quickly. The service is available in 21 countries but has closed canadian, Latin American and Australian services. IMDb TV Newer to this roundup is the Amazon-owned IMDb TV (formerly known as Freedive). It has free, ad-supported TV shows and movies. In February 2020, the service acquired rights to more than 20 Disney-owned series, including Lost, Desperate Housewives, Malcolm in the Middle and My So-Called Life. It's also the only site that lets you stream Lost and Malcolm in the Central for free. Other TV shows in its relatively small library include Fringe, Heroes, Quantum Leap and Forensic Files. Films include Memento, La La Land, Drive, Monster, Donnie Darko, Dune, The Illusionist, Zodiac, Clue, and more. You can watch IMDb TV on the web, Amazon Fire and Apple TV devices, and through the Amazon Prime app that you can find on many smart TVs, tablets, and phones. IMDb TV is only available in the US for now, although a European expansion is in the works. Vudu Walmart owns Vudu which may be better known for its subscription streaming service, but the platform also has impressive content and free ad support. Titles like The Escort, 10,000 Days, and The Offering are good examples of what you'll find. If you sail through the site's 4K/HDR title selection, there are even one or two free options to see. You'll still need a Vudu account, but you can create one for free. The Vudu app has been supported by many platforms, including Roku, Apple TV, consoles and more. In addition, there is an app for most mobile devices. only available in the U.S. Hoopla How's this for a good deal: Sign up for a library card and get free downloads or movie lines, no ads at all. It's a deal when you use Hoopla, a digital media platform that has with local libraries to allow members to access content that can be borrowed online. It's similar to Overdrive, but not just with e-books and play books. The availability of any certain title will depend on your location and the number of copies available for download, but we found some surprisingly decent movies when we checked in August 2020. Streaming will work on any device with a browser, while downloading the Hoopla mobile app request. Not all libraries currently support Hoopla, so make sure you ask. To date, libraries in the United States and Canada have access to Hoopla. YouTube This is one without wisdom. Everyone knows YouTube is the largest online video hosting service, and you may have used the site for silly videos and footage of people being hit with exercise balls. But YouTube also has a s pretty large collection of long-running movies on its free tier. Granted, the majority of these are B-list novelies, but there are a few quality flicks hidden in them. In addition to free movies managed by Google, there are thousands of movies on the site that won't show up unless you search them directly. If you're looking for a specific title, especially an older one, you should do a quick Search on YouTube to see if someone posted it. They are not always uploaded by the rights owner of the film, and many of them are divided into episodes and playlists, but as they say, beg beg beg begies can not choose. Finding free movies on YouTube has become more difficult lately, as many rights owners are choosing to offer their movies for rent through the service, and YouTube also has subscription levels such as YouTube Premium and a live TV live streaming service, YouTube TV. However, you'll find plenty to see, especially if your standard isn't too high on the quality of your stream. Vimeo YouTube may be the largest video hosting site, but Vimeo is probably the best. Yes, those are words of fight, but Vimeo has the muscle to support them. Sites with a neat layout without ads and benefits from an active user community are considered more professional and constructive than YouTube. From this community emerged a lot of great original short and long films. Vimeo also has an On-Demand section, where users can purchase long movies and full TV shows. Most of these are produced independently by Vimeo users, but some services are also produced by major studios. Either way, Vimeo is a great place to find free, high-quality movies. Roku Channel When Roku originally launched the free Roku Channel, which supports advertising, it is not technically eligible for this roundup because you must have one of the company's online communication devices to watch it. The Roku device certainly won't break banks, but they are not free. However, now, the Roku Channel is available to anyone, via the web, as well as through the company's free apps for iOS and Android. The service boasts over 10,000 titles to choose from, including like Con Air, Boyz n the Hood, Must Love Dogs, and Police Academy. You'll need to create a free Roku account before you can watch, but it's a quick and painless process. If you decide to expand your selection, Roku Channel is now home to a number of premium subscription options including Showtime, Epix, and Starz. The Roku Strait is available in the United States and Canada. Plex Free Movies and Plex TV shows are known as a flexible and easy way to manage and view your private collection of movies, music, photos, and other media. However, in 2019, the company launched its own ad-supported free streaming service with a collection of movies and TV shows from studios such as MGM, Warner, Lionsgate and Legendary. It is available globally, although title selection will vary greatly by region. You can access a collection of movies and shows from your browser or on any large number of devices that support Plex client software, such as Apple TV, Roku, smart TVs, etc. All you need is a free Plex account and you're ready. For those who have used Plex as their media server, free ad-supported options can be added to the existing server category, making the experience completely seamless. Pluto TV Although it may not be as well known as the above services, Pluto TV still deserves your attention. It not only hosts free movies on demand, but also a free TV live streaming service, hosting managed content from all over the web. While the channels are wildly different, we're focused here on the movies. Pluto TV currently has many live movie channels, perfect if you want to watch something but do not know what. There are two versatile film channels, the rest focusing on specific genres or genres, including Action Movies, Flicks of Fury, Horror 24/7, Classic Movies, Black Cinema, Gravitas Movies and The Asylum. The service operates in the United States, as well as many international locations. Pluto TV's on-demand movie library is relatively small and filmed regularly, but offers as many categories as its live movie channels. It's also available on a lot of devices off your computer, including Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Roku devices, and more. To learn more about Pluto TV, check out our full guide to the service. Tubi TV Another up-and-comer, Tubi is very similar to Sony Crackle, in that it offers both free movies and TV episodes. Regardless of which device you use, you'll most likely be able to watch Tubi, as it's available on Android, iOS, Roku, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Samsung Smart TV, Sony Smart TV, PlayStation 4, Xbox One, and web. As with the majority of the services on this list, you'll need to see a few ads, but that's what keeps the service free. Tubi has content from more than 200 partners, including NBCUniversal, which offers nearly 400 classic titles such as Warrior Princess, Hercules: The Legendary Journeys, The A-Team, Punky Brewster and the original version of P.I., The Bionic Woman, and Transformers. Cult classics such as Assault on Precinct 13, Sleepaway Camp and C.H.U.D., along with upcoming cult classics such as 10 Cloverfield Lane and No Country for Old Men, can also be found in the growing catalogue. If you're using this service to complement Netflix instead of replacing it, the Not on Netflix section will help you find new and exciting movies to watch. Independent films and documentaries SnagFilms Snagfilms is an on-demand video site that sports a selection of movies you can't find anywhere else on the web. Founded in 2008, it amassed about 10,000 independent documentaries and narrative films. There are plenty of rare gems to see here, and since the founders have worked to establish dozens of partnerships, there are also plenty of different streaming devices that support SnagFilms for free. The service is now available as a free app for iOS and Android, but it is also compatible with various Roku devices, Kindles and a host of other streaming devices. The main site is also easy to navigate. Snagfilms are available worldwide, but some titles are only available in the United States and Canada. Kanopy Like Hoopla, Kanopy is not only free to use, but also commercial if you have a library card. Originally founded in 2008 in Australia as an educational tool, Kanopy now offers a library of over 30,000 films through partnerships with over 200 libraries. There's a heavy focus on free ins just movies and documentaries (the company even has access to many recent movies from the A24 category), but you'll find all sorts of movies available, and even more is on the way thanks to a deal that will see filmmaker Fred Wiseman's entire catalogue come to service. Kanopy is available worldwide, but the content may vary by location. Top Documentary Love Documentaries? So do we. You know what they say, the truth is stranger than fiction. The aptly able Top Documentary is, hands down, the best site for documentaries. Not every choice has a movie length, but a documentary or not is necessarily long - some of the best movies are below the 60-minute mark. Boasting a library of over 3,000 movies, the site also has a simple and simple layout and sorts all its films based on the theme, making it easy to find something you care about right away. Content is not hosted by the site, but managed and embedded from other sites such as YouTube, Vimeo, Daily Motion, etc. It is available worldwide, but not all content will work in all locations. The classic movie Archive.org Most likely, you are reading this article because you are looking for a place to watch new movies released online. While there's nothing wrong with that, you definitely shouldn't ignore all the great old internet movies Provide. Archive.org offers a real treasure troves of old movies that you've probably never heard of, as well as a that you will recognize. Archives - also home to the famous Wayback Machine that shows you how the internet used to be - there are silent movies, black-and-white thrillers, minimalist science fiction movies and a host of other films. They may not have all the fancy CGI we've all grown accustomed to, but regular throwback is a great way to mix things up. Open Culture Open Culture is designed to be your stopover for everything free and cultured. The site offers hundreds of free online classes to enroll in, thousands of free ebooks to read, and hours after lectures from celebrities like Carl Sagan and Leonard Bernstein. It also offers 1 ton of free movies. Here, you'll find everything from silent movies and hitchcock-helmed projects to Western and movie noir. The site even contains some of the first shorts of legends such as Quentin Tarantino and Stanley Kubrick. Open culture can be difficult to navigate, but with over 1,000 free movies available, it's definitely worth using the slogan. Big Five Glories If the name seems kind of corny, it's because the folks behind the project spent their time compiling hundreds of free films from the 1920s to the 50s - aka Hollywood's Golden Age - instead of coming up with hip and edgy names. (If you're curious, there's a reference to five former major movie houses: 20th Century Fox, RKO Pictures, Paramount Pictures, Warner Bros., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.) If your idea of a fun weekend is to kick back and watch Turner Classic Movies, you'll dig Big Five Glories. All films are considered in the public domain, so there are no restrictions on availableity. Retrovison Retrovison is another public domain site that features hundreds of classic films from different eras. The word classic can be explained - there are some films here that were made as recently as last year, and not all retrovison films are of high quality - but there's still a lot of good things here. Retrovison is also a well-designed site that allows users to filter based on genres. It's also not limited to feature-length movies, as there's a strong collection of classic TV shows to choose from. Shocker Internet Drive-In Shocker Internet Drive-In is a bit appropriate, and its website looks like it was made in the 90s, but it's a great resource. The site is updated weekly with outstanding horror classics, which are then offered for free download as a WMV file at the site's Snack Bar. The site is an interesting little blast from the past, with weekly displays framed in a digital drive-in. Users can also purchase DVD copies of any movie on the site for just $3. If you miss the old days of the internet when it was like the Wild West and things were less polished, this might be for you. Disadvantages of a lot of services each other is available is that if you have a movie in mind but don't know where to watch it, you have a lot of different catalogs to wade through in hopes of it. Fortunately, as long as you have a smartphone, you can have access to a tool that can help you. Apple's TV app, available on iOS as well as several other platforms including Apple TV, Roku, Amazon Fire TV, along with LG and Samsung smart TVs, lets you search across over 50 different streaming services. For Android users, the Google Play Movies & TV app offers the same functionality, although the number of connected services is smaller. Roku devices now have an outstanding Free section that offers a wide selection of the best free content on the platform, whether you have a specific channel installed or not. This is in addition to finding its existing multi-service, although most of what you will find will be available for purchase or rental or will be available on a service that requires registration. Either way, although these tools can't guarantee you'll find a way to see what you're looking for for free, they can be a good place to start. Editor's recommendations
